

Home Office LONDON RESILIENCE

Strategic Coordination Summit

Thursday 14th November 2019 at The Oval, London, SE11 5SS (09:30-16:00)

Background

The London Resilience Partnership, in collaboration with the Counter Terrorism Preparedness Network (CTPN) and the UK Home Office (Office for Security and Counter Terrorism), are hosting a one day strategic coordination summit on Thursday 14th November 2019 at The Oval, London.

The summit will focus on counter terrorism consequence management. Consequence management usually takes place in parallel to, and continues beyond, the response to an incident. It is concerned with the wider implications for communities and cities as a whole rather than on-scene operations.

The summit will consist of input from guest speakers, including the former Police Commissioner for Boston who will reflect on the 2013 Boston Marathon attacks, and Dr Idit Albert on post-traumatic stress and the implications for public services following London Terrorist Incidents.

It will further include a facilitated table-top exercise based on an attack at a major event and a transport hub. This will consider the ripple effects and community impacts of such and seek to identify how these can be minimised and arrangements developed to aide multi-agency planning, response and recovery.

Delegates will also receive copies of five strategic reports related to counter terrorism preparedness and consequence management, released by CTPN.

Aim and Objectives

The aim of the strategic coordination summit is to bring together strategic representatives from across London and partnering cities to enhance their understanding of preparedness and consequence management relating to a terrorist attack at a major event. The objectives are to:

- Understand the complexities associated with responding to and recovering from a terrorist attack at a major event and the protection measures/arrangements that can be put in place;
- Raise awareness of the implications of a terrorist attack through the exploration of a scenario;
- Focus on consequence management to distil demands, priorities and actions in this context;
- Learn from the experiences of the participating cities and consider how they may be applied;
- Identify the key strategic issues, dependencies and expectations across organisations;
- Inform the development of city arrangements, plans and procedures.
